

TeamQ Report

Team-Q was developed for self and peer assessment of an individual's teamwork skills. It is designed for undergraduate education as a practical method for assessing teamwork as a learning outcome. The following describes teamwork behaviors, with students report on a five point scale how often their peers (and self) demonstrate each of the behaviors (Never, Sometimes, Usually, Regularly, Always).

TeamQ Ratings Radar

Below is a radar chart that presents the results of your teammates rating of your abilities and your own ratings of your abilities. The ratings of your teammates have been averaged together for ease of comparison.

Suggestions to Improve

Part of the TeamQ was to “Write one specific, actionable goal to help your teammate improve their teamwork competency”. Presented below are the goals you wrote for yourself, followed by the goals your teammates wrote for you.

Feedback	Comment
others	Keep being the critical eye at the end of projects it is very helpful to have someone read through assignments so thoroughly and see the gaps and missed connections You have strong leadership skills and are always quick to step in and manage conflict You often express strong opinions which is usually very helpful but can prevent others from being heard try occasionally keeping your opinions less strong to make room for others
others	You are extremely thorough and detailed in your work You are direct and able to successfully and sensitively moderate group conflict You balance work with pleasure and are able to stay on track Try to be comfortable with some uncertainty in decisions about content from a literature evidence perspective others	Lacey Keep leading well during team meetings You re always so organized and on top of everything even if you don t think you are sometimes Constructive criticism would be to leave room for others to participate more Sometimes you can take the lead so well that it makes it challenging for the other members to bring their ideas forward Overall a really effective and valuable team member