

TeamQ Report

Team-Q was developed for self and peer assessment of an individual's teamwork skills. It is designed for undergraduate education as a practical method for assessing teamwork as a learning outcome. The following describes teamwork behaviors, with students report on a five point scale how often their peers (and self) demonstrate each of the behaviors (Never, Sometimes, Usually, Regularly, Always).

TeamQ Ratings Radar

Below is a radar chart that presents the results of your teammates rating of your abilities and your own ratings of your abilities. The ratings of your teammates have been averaged together for ease of comparison.

Suggestions to Improve

Part of the TeamQ was to “Write one specific, actionable goal to help your teammate improve their teamwork competency”. Presented below are the goals you wrote for yourself, followed by the goals your teammates wrote for you.

Feedback	Comment
others	Silka you were very dedicated to our group and was an active participant On at least two occasions when you felt that you weren t contributing enough you expressed this offered to help others and asked for more work You actively took on roles tasks that you knew you wanted to work on build skills ie presentations and leading the children s group Your dedication to your own learning was inspirational At times you made requests to the group based on your own needs without considering the needs of the entire group and this caused some frustration that was expressed Your ability to openly receive feedback and apply it was noticed and greatly appreciated On occasion during labs and groups meetings you asked questions pertaining to your own learning which slowed the groups process In the future it may be helpful to ask your group members at the end of the meeting or meet outside of group time for help rather than during group sessions You are very hard working and dedicated I found the way you took on challenges and faced your fears encouraging It made me want to work harder
others	Keep up with your ability to take and implement feedback given by peers Try taking more initiative to figure things out on your own rather than monopolizing group time with questions about what is being discussed Try being more conscious of other people s learning styles that are different from your own so that the group can run smoothly Keep up the good work when giving presentations
others	You are calm and respectful in discussions with the team You are very willing and open to take on responsibility You communicate appropriately with the team and confront conflict when you feel it is needed Try to be conscious about holding up the group Consider trying to focus on one task at a time as it can be frustrating to repeat things over again If you are confused with something ask for help but if it is taking a long time try to review it later others	Silka Your passion and willingness during projects really comes through in teamwork settings Your enthusiasm during our projects was definitely an asset in producing work we could be proud of Going forward you may consider being more able to compromise with scheduling of meetings Another point to consider Being passionate about as singular idea topic it can be really helpful in certain situations but not others it is a good skill to know when to keep pushing an idea and when to let an idea go Overall great work this year
